Is the proper place for a defender's trump ace always on declarer's or dummy's king? Not by a long shot. Because the ace of trumps is the most important card in the deck at suit play, a defender is sometimes better placed when he refuses to win this maneuver often transfers

Opening lead Club jack

The winning defense is for East to refuse to win dummy's trump king. Now it's South who has a problem. If South continues with dummy's trump jack, East wins and punches South with his fourth club. South's only chance is to ruff and hope trumps split 3-3. When they don't split favorably, West's fourth trump is promoted to the setting trick and the game goes one down.
